Counsel Chittenden, for the accused desired to address the court. Chittenden reviewed the evidence from beginning to end, dwelling for some length on the evidence of pay clerk Hansche, who appeared as an expert on pay officers' vouchers and their duties as paymasters. At the conclusion of his address Lieutenant Garst, who prosecuted the case throughout for the United States, arose and reviewed the testimony of both sides. Lieutenant Garst proved an impartial prosecutor, giving the accused every possible point that could be conceded. Lieutenant Garst was followed by Lieutenant Rose, who delivered an able address, which was virtually in favor of the accused. Here the case closed. Tomorrow the court will reconvene, when the members will sign the findings, which will be transmitted to Washington for approval.
